

CASARENA

505 Chardonnay

Region

Located just south of Mendoza City, Luján de Cuyo is home to some of the most famous names in Argentine wine and was the first region to be recognised as an appellation in 1993. In the rain shadow of the Andes, viticulture is only made possible here by the Mendoza River bringing meltwater to the desert-like conditions. The high-altitude vineyards exploit an extended growing season (due to diurnal temperature variation) and stressed vines (due to poor, rocky soils) to produce bold, intensely flavoured wines, particularly Malbec.

Producer

Casarena are proud to be both custodians and interpreters of the distinctive terroir of Luján de Cuyo in Mendoza. The winery itself, built in 1937 and sympathetically renovated in 2008, sits in the heart of Perdriel. Single vineyard specialists, they produce a range of varietal and blended wines from four vineyards – Jamilla (which surrounds the winery), Lauren, Owen and Naoki – across Perdriel, Agrelo and Alto Agrelo. The certified sustainable vineyards are a tribute the diversity of the area. Each enjoys different elevation, sun orientation and soil composition allowing winemaker Martina Galeano to create markedly different profiles within a varietal to showcase the unique expression of each vineyard.

Viticulture

Harvested between the last week of February and the first week of March.

Vinification

Grapes are hand-selected in whole bunches to be pressed gently. Fermentation, using selected yeasts, is at low temperatures to preserve and enhance aromatic complexity. No malolactic fermentation.

Tasting Note

The nose has a great aromatic expression of tropical fruit with a stony minerality to the fore. The palate shows good acidity with a rounded, creamy texture, rich fruit character and crisp finish.

Food Matching

Perfect as an aperitif but equally delicious with fish and Asian food.
